Disarmament Debate Starts Before UN

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — The United States and Britain went into a U.N. disarmament debate today under growing Asian and Soviet pressure to stop nuclear tests promptly.

Western sources said the two allies would stand by their position that they would suspend the tests only after reaching agreement with the Soviet Union to stop making nuclear bombs, cut armed forces and carry out other disarmament measures.

The debate was scheduled in the 12-nation U.N. Disarmament Commission, meeting to consider a report from its five-nation subcommittee on the unsuccessful negotiations held in London March 1-Sept. 6.

The commission after the debate was expected to relay the subcommittee report to the 24-nation General Assembly for discussion in the Assembly's main Political Committee, to begin perhaps late next week.

The Soviet Union, India and Japan have submitted resolutions to pave the Assembly call on the atomic powers—Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States—to suspend nuclear tests subject only to inspection. The Soviet proposal would start the suspension Jan. 1, the others on completion of an inspection agreement.

Teamsters Get Chance to Look Over Evidence

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The scandal-ridden Teamsters Union today received and accepted a bid from the Senate Rackets Committee in Washington to inspect evidence in committee files challenging qualifications of some Teamsters convention delegates.

Dave Beck, Teamster president, revealed an exchange of telegrams with Committee Chairman McClellan (D-Ark.) as the Teamsters open their fateful convention with a roaring ovation for Beck.

Beck told reporters he received a telegram from McClellan last night saying the Senate committee has evidence in its files that some convention delegates have been chosen illegally. McClellan offered to turn it over to the union.

Beck said he replied the union would like to see the data and has assigned a Washington attorney, Martin McDonough, to visit the Senate committee office in Washington this morning.

Beck said he had assured McClellan that the convention credentials committee is "carefully investigating" the legality of selection of delegates.

"The information you have may be helpful even at this late date," Beck said he wired McClellan.

More than 100 delegates have been formally challenged before the credentials committee.

When Beck entered the packed municipal auditorium, the delegates gave him a resounding ovation. He and James R. Hoffa, present Midwest Teamster boss and leading candidate to succeed the retiring Beck as union president, posed together waving at the delegates.

One of Hoffa's four announced rivals for the presidency, Thomas L. Hickey of New York, like Hoffa a Teamster vice president, was roundly booed when he entered the convention.

John F. English, aging Teamster International secretary-treasurer, got a big hand when he stumped down to the platform on his wooden leg. He also posed shaking hands with Hoffa.

English never has announced his choice for the union presidency. His endorsement would be an influential factor.

An early showdown between Hoffa and rival candidates for the $50,000 a year post was forecast. English held a possible key to the battle for union control.

Stock Market Settles to Slow Trading

NEW YORK (UP) — Stock trading settled down to a dull, narrow moving affair today.

Allegheny Corp. provided an active, weak feature, leading in turn-over and losing a full point. The drop reflected a court ruling that the Interstate Commerce Commission had no authority to approve issuance of new 6 per cent stock.

A string of Maracaibo Oil amounting to 8,500 shares at a small dip lifted that issue into the active group. General Motors had a large turnover at a small decline while Chrysler rose ¼ point on small sales.

Steels held in a narrow rut. Metals were firm. Tobacco continued to move higher with Louisville at a new high on a rise of a point and Liggett Myers up more than a point. American Tobacco rose nearly a point. Rails produced several small gains as did the oils. Steadfast held firm and chemicals steady.

Among the specials, Newmont Mining lost 3 and Black & Decker set a new low. Johns-Manville rose a point in the building department.

Noon Dow Jones averages: Industrials 457.73 up 0.84; rails 124.29 up 0.14; utilities 66.82 off 0.06; and 85 stocks 157.00 up 0.19.

Special Session Likely Gov. Faubus Declares

Blames Brownell for Preventing 'Cooling Period'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The magazine U. S. News World Report said today President Eisenhower and Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas considered a cooling off period in Little Rock's school integration crisis.

It said Eisenhower at one time in his talk with Faubus "seemed inclined to go along with the idea" but Atty. Gen. Brownell balked.

In a copyrighted article from Little Rock, the magazine reported what it termed "the inside story" of the Sept. 14 meeting between Eisenhower and Faubus at Newport, R. I. The talk preceded the federal court order for removal of National Guardsmen Faubus had assigned to Central High School with orders, among other things, to keep Negro pupils out.

Unnamed top sources inside the Arkansas State House were given as the source for the report.

Faubus, in a recent Little Rock television appearance, praised the coverage given the school situation there by U. S. News-World Report.

Here is the magazine's account of the Eisenhower-Faubus meeting:

Eisenhower and Faubus talked together along at the start of the conference. Faubus "found the President cool toward him at the outset—very stiff and aloof." Faubus gave his version of the integration situation in Arkansas and Eisenhower "seemed to warm up to the problem."

Brownell and others later joined session. "When Mr. Brownell came into the room," the magazine reported, "The President turned to him and asked if a sort of stay of execution couldn't be arranged to let tempers cool."

"The attorney general told the President that such a thing could not be done. He said the court in Arkansas had ordered the Justice Department to enter the case as a friend of the court and that his department was not permitted under that order to do anything but see that immediate integration was carried out."

"Gov. Faubus . . . told the President . . . that Mr. Brownell could agree to a stay of execution if he wanted to without violating the court's order."

U. S. News World Report said Eisenhower at first "seemed inclined to go along with the idea of a delay to see what would happen if things were allowed to cool off for a period." It said "Brownell's insistence on action upset that idea."

Faubus was pictured as having gotten the impression Brownell "had his back up and was determined to push ahead."

Every time the conference got back to the cooling off idea, the magazine said, "the meeting ran into Atty. Gen. Brownell's insistence that the federal government had to act."

It said Faubus told the President he "wasn't trying to flout the law; that he was looking for a solution to the problem that would allow both sides—the federal and state governments—to get out of it as gracefully as possible."

This was the magazine's summation of the meeting's outcome: "Nothing was decided. No agreement was reached."

Brownell's office, which has consistently referred inquiries about the Little Rock situation to the White House, declined comment on the U. S. News World Report article.

New McGuffey Reader Is Published

TEXARKANA (AP)—The Golden Rule Series of Modern McGuffey Readers, published under the sponsorship of the Palmer Foundation, is the subject of an article in the education section of Time magazine this week.

Funds for the research and planning of the readers were furnished by the Palmer Foundation, a philanthropic enterprise established by the late Clyde E. Palmer, Arkansas newspaper publisher.

"Early in the Twentieth Century," the Time article says, "the sternly preachy anthologies called McGuffey's Eclectic Readers faded out of the American classroom. Ever since, many elementary school teachers have been stumped by the problem of instructing pupils in moral themes without the modern sin of spoon-feeding."

The problem now appearing solved by a set of moral-based readers called the Golden Rule Series, published by the American Book Company of New York City. Subtitle of the series: The Modern McGuffey Readers. Wary of its competitors, America is keeping mum about its total sales. But said contented President Grant Houston Brown: "We haven't had such an immediate acceptance in 30 years."

Optimistically, Brown and editor Walter M. Mason hope the Golden Rule Series "will help curb juvenile delinquency by exposing pupils to their 11 themes."

So far, at least, the children are meeting them halfway. In Cincinnati public schools, which bought sets of books for their 4th, 5th and 6th grades, boys and girls are even reading the modern McGuffeys on their own time. The favorable reaction of one 5th grade girl: "Things that are funny really are funny and things that are serious really are serious."

Judgement of $13,500 Is Upheld

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court today refused to disturb a $13,500 judgment awarded for condemnation of 6.44 acres taken for a highway near Jacksonville.

The Arkansas Highway Commission contended that the award, made by a Pulaski Circuit Court jury to owners Frank G. Cardor and Frank G. Cardor Jr., was excessive.

The Supreme Court, in a unanimous opinion, pointed out that witnesses for the Cardors estimated damages at from $45,000 to $71,500.

"These witnesses were of the opinion that said lands were strategically located for business use as a shopping area for the inhabitants of the rapidly-growing city of Jacksonville and the Little Rock Air Force base," the court said.

"In condemnation proceedings like this we have repeatedly held that the owner may be allowed to show every advantage that his property possesses, present and prospective, in order that the jury may satisfactorily determine what price it could be sold for on the market."

The Highway Commission took the land for reconstruction and relocation of U. S. Highway 67.

Warns Against Sizeable Cut of West Army

BOON, Germany (UP) — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer warned today against any one-sided cut in the West's armed forces.

He cautioned that for "psychological reasons" alone it would be wrong for the West to slash its defenses without winning anything in return from the Soviets.

But he conceded that Soviet fear of U.S. armed might make it "most unlikely" Russia would wage war. "They are quite aware that the U.S. is stronger than the Soviet Union and that they probably would destroy themselves by war," he said.

Adenauer said his landslide victory in the Sept. 15 general elections also served as a warning to the Soviets of the West's determination — and that the election victory showed the German public's support.

Adenauer made these other main points in an interview: —West Germany's policy will continue to be based on close membership in the Western alliance.

—West Germany will fulfill its NATO arms commitments but will not speed up its rearmament timetable.

—He expects to see substantial progress towards German reunification during the next four years. The West must continue patiently showing the Soviets it is wrong for them to block a United Germany.

—West Germany will support any Western policy "that can lead to honorable progress in the disarmament issue."

—There is no acute war danger today such as there was at the time of the Suez crisis a year ago.

Legislature May Be Asked to Close School

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval Faubus today said that "at the moment, it appears very likely there will be a special session of the Legislature" to take up the Little Rock integration crisis.

Such a session, if it is called, would be asked to deal with the Little Rock school integration controversy in which Faubus is arrayed against the federal government.

Faubus added with emphasis, however, that the special session "still isn't definite."

The governor said he was not ready to say what form any bill dealing with the integration dispute would take.

There have been suggestions that the Legislature be asked to close Little Rock Central High School where federal troops are enforcing court ordered integration of nine Negro students and have the school reopened as a private institution.

Faubus said he thought the Legislature was "predominantly" in favor of an "extra session."

He said this was his impression from personal conversations, letters, telephone calls and telegrams.

Any act which would close Central High School or withhold financial aid from it presumably must apply to all schools in the state, Capitol observers said.

Thus, to close Central High, all schools would have to be closed. It states financial aid were withdrawn because "it is an integrated school, not to all integrated schools" presumably must be stopped.

Faubus said he believed the Legislature has the power to close the schools.

Meanwhile, the nine Negroes about whom the controversy swirled began their second week of integrated classes without incident at Central High.

They again were escorted into the huge yellow brick building — but only one paratrooper accompanied them compared with the 24 who took them into the building last Wednesday.

Soldiers flew here Tuesday on President Eisenhower's orders after a segregationist mob grew violent and fought police the previous day.

The paratroopers from the 101st Airborne Division escorted nine Negroes into classes. Wednesday and used bayonets to disperse crowds of white demonstrators.

Some 300 soldiers took positions around the school at 7 a.m. CST today but the bayonets had been removed from their rifles.

However, the bayonets were attached to the troops' belts, ready for use.

Fall Mission Study Held in Peck Home

Forty-three members representing all six circles of the WSCS of the First Methodist Church, met in the home of Mrs. George Peck Thursday, September 26, for the second session of the fall mission study on Japan. The entertaining rooms of the Peck home were decorated with arrangements of Gerbera lilies and philodendron plants. The official flag of Japan was on display.

The worship service was lead by Mrs. Edwin Ward, with a picture of Christ as the worship center. She closed the service with a story of an ex-kamikaze pilot who founded a Christian church for abandoned Japanese children.

An explanation of the importance and the organization of the National Christian Council of Japan was presented by Mrs. Max Solar. The class was then divided into two sections for a "buss session" in order to find in the textbook ways in which the NCC is helping Japanese family life and also that of the underprivileged. Both sides reported their findings, which were then listed on the blackboard.

There was a short social period, at the beginning of which Mrs. E. P. Young, Jr., and Mrs. George Peck, dressed in Japanese costume, began preparations for serving tea Japanese fashion, kneeling on cushions beside a low table. While the tea was brewing, guests were given napkins on which were pasted-colored Japanese scenes and were asked to locate each article pictured as its name was called in Japanese. The tea set was one which Mrs. Young brought back from Japan, where she formerly lived. Mrs. Young explained the details of the ritualistic tea ceremony, which has evolved out of Buddhist rites. Small rice cakes in assorted shapes and favors, imported from Japan, were served with the tea. After the guests had been served, Mrs. Young told several facts about the customs and clothing of Japan, showing two types of footwear used. She demonstrated the way in which chopsticks are used, with a pair made of porcelain.

Following the tea, the program was resumed with an imaginary committee meeting of the NCC enacted by the following people: Mrs. L. B. Tooley, chairman; Mrs. Bob Turner, secretary; Mrs. H. O. Kyler, treasurer; Mrs. Johnnie Green, a member. This discussion showed the structure and accomplishments of the United Church, the largest Christian unit in Japan. Miss Mary Anita Laseter told of the cooperation of the NCC with the Allied Occupation, and also of the mutual help between Japanese churches and American servicemen during the occupation.

It was announced that the last two sessions will be held at the church at 1:30 p. m. on September 30 and October 3.

Mrs. Ward closed the meeting

The very young teenager going back to school this fall will include both the jumper, in sport version, and the classic shirtwaist in her wardrobe. We show here the full-skirted jumper (left) for the young gal with figure problems. It has a wide waistband for a tiny waist look and gathered skirt that takes care of hip and thigh bulges. Trim is black braid. The classic shirtwaist (center) is beloved of teenagers and subteens. This one has a panel of pleats in the skirt front for a soft look plus huge pockets at either side. For slim gals, there's this narrow jumper worn here with classic cotton shirtwaist (right). All fashions are in corduroy. They are priced to be well within bounds of a young budget.

Why Not Social Clubs for the Lonely Middle-Aged?

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a widow of 57, highly respected where I work, but lonely nevertheless. I'd like so much to make new friends and am especially interested in meeting a gentleman of good morals. Have you any suggestions?

M. W. Dear M. W.: How I wish some humane-minded organization like the U. N. would drop affairs of international import and spend a few minutes on solving this ever-present problem of loneliness in older people. Communities, churches, even individual sponsors provide plenty of social clubs for teenagers. Why not give their elders a break?

By the time men and women have reached middle age, they seem to lose the capacity to make friends. Unless they have children or friends acquired in youth, they face a lonely span of years. The middle-aged group is especially neglected. The very young or the very old rate attention; the in-between do not.

I should be very pleased to hear from any club that does seek to promote friendships among the 40- or 50-year-old group, especially those sponsored by churches or civic organizations. I'll be only too happy to pass the good word along and, believe me, it will be appreciated.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My father is constantly correcting my brother and I. But if we try to correct him, he gets mad, and says young with a prayer.

children shouldn't correct their elders. My brother and I are both in our teens. SARA Dear Sara: If Dad corrects your grammar, he has a point. It can stand it. By and large, parents know more than children, so let the correcting go until you've grown a little in wisdom.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Mrs. X is divorced. She is presently living in an apartment with her three children, and a married man who is her boy friend. Since she has proven herself an unfit mother because of their illicit relationship, does her ex-husband have a right to demand custody of the children? He is quite able to provide a nice home.

JUST INTERESTED Dear Just Interested: A custody case is always open to review when circumstances indicate a change would be best for the youngsters. I sincerely hope Dad can do better for them than he did in his first try.

Dear Dorothy Dix: This summer I met the boy. I know there will never be anyone else for me and I have every reason to believe he feels the same about me. We'd like to marry at once, but he's just beginning college, and we have four years ahead of us. As an added obstacle, he's going to an out-of-town school and we won't see each other for more than a weekend every month. Folks say our love can't survive this separation. Do you agree with us that it can, and will?

TROUBLED HEART Dear Troubled Heart: I'm a sentimentalist if ever there was one, but even I can't assure you. Right now you are in the beautiful throes of first love, neither of you can set a fault in the beloved, everything about each other is perfect. As time goes on and this misguided conception lessens, you see each other through the other side of the telescope. If your love is true, the new outlook will serve to strengthen your feelings for each other. If you are victims of a summer romance, it's best to know soon. In the next four years either your love will grow and mature, or break into fragments like a piece of brittle parchment.

A word of warning - don't weigh each other down with promises or vows. Continue as free agents and put faith in the future.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a girl of 22, married to a man 20 years my senior. The marriage has been a failure from the beginning. Inevitably I began to have an affair with a man in service. I still date him when he comes home. This spring I went to an office picnic, had too much to drink and now find that I'm pregnant by a man in the office. Should I continue my farce of a marriage or try to get one of the other two men to me?

CONFUSED Dear Confused: You have little or no chance of getting either of the other two dupes to marry you. Why do you think men have affairs with married women? Primarily so there will be no danger of wedding bells.

If your husband will keep you, stay and learn some decency.

Dear Millie: The English language is well equipped with words to serve your purpose. However, only you can use them. Tell him exactly what you told me - "I'm tired of entertaining you!"

Dear Dorothy Dix: A few weeks ago I told my parents I was going to the movies but instead I went off in a car with Buddy. You see, although I'm 15, my folks won't let me date. They caught me this time (I had done it several times before) and now they don't trust me even when I go to church. How can I get my parents to trust me again?

FRANKIE Dear Frankie: What you want is to be trusted so you can sneak out again, isn't it? You've betrayed your parents' trust so often, you can scarcely expect them to have faith in you now. Be trustworthy, and your folks will regain confidence in you - though it will take time.

Syria Leaders in Desperate Position

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A handful of leaders in Syria are in a desperate predicament.

They do not want war and they cannot afford peace.

They fear the Communist East and hate the democratic West.

They dream of annihilating Israel and live in dread of the Israelis.

They proclaim a passion for Arab unity and work to subvert the governments of their Arab neighbors.

They have been toying carelessly with the issue of war or peace. But there are indications now that they realize how dangerous the game has become. There are signs — slight but significant — that they are willing to experiment with a period of calm.

How long they and their Arab neighbors can restrain themselves is anybody's guess.

Most Middle East observers would wager the restraint could not last long. The Syrian regime was born of turmoil and exists on it. It does not seem secure enough yet to withstand the effects of any long period of tranquility.

With Saudi Arabia's King Saud weaving his influence like a delicate oriental pattern through the Arab Fertile Crescent, there are indications now that overtures for a political truce among Arabs might bear some fruit. But the fruit is of the sort which needs the tenderest care to survive. It is highly perishable.

The fate of peacemaking overtures depends largely on the intentions and ambitions of a few men in Damascus.

First and foremost among these at present is the Syrian strong man, Lt. Col. Abdul Hamid Surraj, who obviously is the power behind the army chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Afif Blazy.

FLOGGING PENALTY

Down to the year 1800, imprisonment was uncommon; flogging was the chief method of punishing crime, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The valley floor of the Nile River is seven feet higher today than it was in Cleopatra's time, reports the National Geographic Society. This is due to the silt deposited by annual floodings.

Down Trend of Market Is Puzzling

By AM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's unusual downturn while all the talk is of inflation and more inflation and of high national income puzzles many observers.

Historically stock prices should rise when inflation is in the saddle. Last Wednesday, however, the Associated Press index of the price average of 60 stocks hit its low for the year, down $24 from the year's low of mid-July.

Close watchers of the market have a number of explanations. They don't all jibe—but then neither do the opinions of these experts on the immediate course of many individual stocks. That's why we have a stock exchange in the first place.

Ignoring the many arguments of the Bulls, let's look only at what makes the Bears tick today.

Some say that sellers of stocks are reacting to the recent switch in business psychology from a belief in a fall resumption of the boom to a cautious view that the present slowdown in the business pace is likely to change to a let down before the boom resumes again, some time in the future. Others cite the squeeze on business earnings showing up in early bird report on their quarter profits. They fear its effect on dividend rates, although the dollar total of dividend payments is still running ahead of last year.

A sizable number feel that earlier optimism was overdone, that the soaring prices of stocks of many corporations discounted their earnings for some time ahead. They hold that it could be quite a while before earnings and dividends catch up with these high values and make yields adequate.

This school is inclined to hold also that maybe it's time for the economy to take a breather. The same ultra-conservatives worry about the debt load carried by the federal government and its effect on the economy.

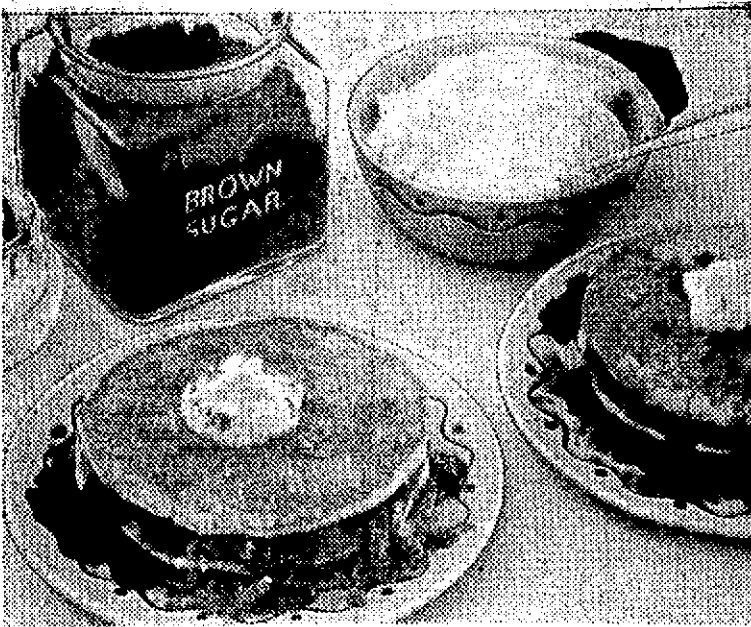

Some traders appear to be moved by the administration's continuing attack on the part of more liberal policy. They fear that the tight money policy aimed at checking the boom to stave off a just might worse to well—and trigger a recession—although almost all think it comes it will be mild and brief.

Cuts in military spending hits some sections of the market, those holding government contracts or supplying those who do, and this seeps into the thinking of other traders, too.

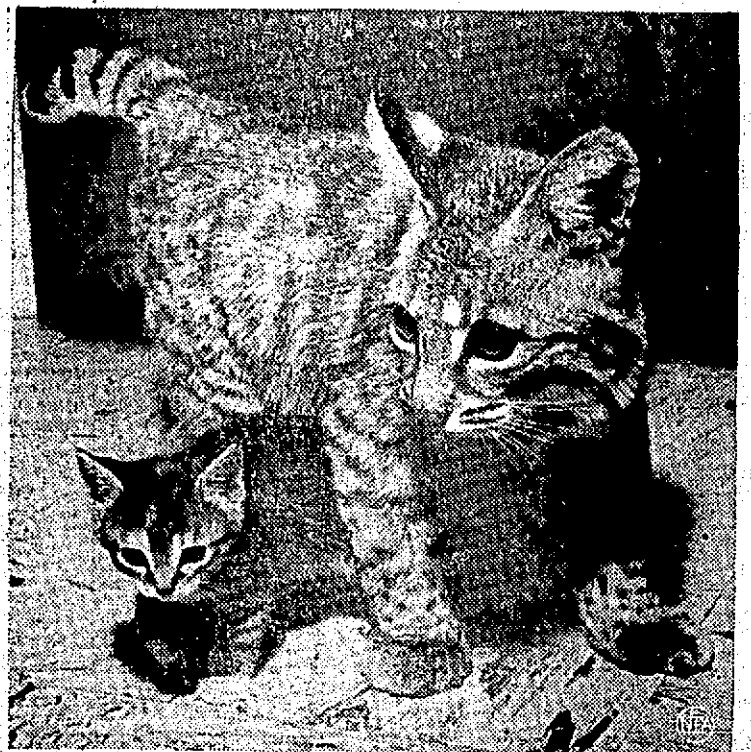

Uncertainty is always the bane of the stock trader. There is plenty of that around just now. One is the general business outlook—which way will the course of industry and trade turn?

Russia is talking tough again and what that means is still unclear. Some watch nervously its effect on American corporate investments in the Middle and Far East.

Opinions differ too as to how soon the piston-propeller age will become entirely the jet age and whether that will give way to the missile age. Others ask how about

BIG BROTHER — "Willie" the wildcat, who's a real sourpuss when it comes to dogs, acts as a gentle protector to this "other" kitten in West Richland, Wash., where he's a house pet of Sgt. Kelly W. city without a thought of being molested. And, the Little Rock experience notwithstanding, American children do normally go to school without protection from bayonets.

The lesson gradually emerging from going to school at Little Rock would have it—that this is a country torn by racial violence.

Rather, it is that in spite of occasional missteps this is a country governed by law and not by the whim or prejudices of men.

The men in the Kremlin can hardly, with a straight face, make the same claim for their part of the world. Not after the iron rule of Josef Stalin, the crushing of resistance in Hungary—well, the bill of particulars is too well known to need detailing.

As for the missteps in this country:

There was the "mob of extremists," as President Eisenhower put it over the weekend, which stopped some Negro adolescents from going to school at Little Rock. The mob was dispersed, and in short order, by federal troops.

Not—and this is important—because the President necessarily favors mixing of white and Negro pupils. He has been careful to avoid a strong personal opinion one way or the other. He called out troops on the ground that a federal court order directing integration was being flouted. The troops restored order. The court's decree is being carried out.

Some, notably Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus, thought the President's action unnecessary. But such counteraction as is now in prospect in all of the legal level. Nobody is defending the mob, least of all Faubus, for all that Eisenhower practically accused him of fomenting the violence.

Even if Arkansas takes the step now under consideration by some officials — closing Little Rock's Central High School as a way of getting the federal troops out — it would be done by legal means. The State Legislature would be called on to take the action, and then presumably it would be fought out in the courts.

All this falling back on legal processes is far less dramatic, of course, than mob violence or military force. Will the point get across to the rest of the world that Americans are, after all, proving themselves a people who depend on courts and legislatures rather than fists and bayonets?

One hint that this may happen came yesterday from an Asian. India's Defense Minister V. K. Krishna Menon, who has often been figured as anti-American, or at least as "neutral" with leaning toward the Communists. Menon said in a television interview that in the Little Rock affair: "I was impressed by the fact that no outstanding statesman of any party has come out in favor of mob rule."

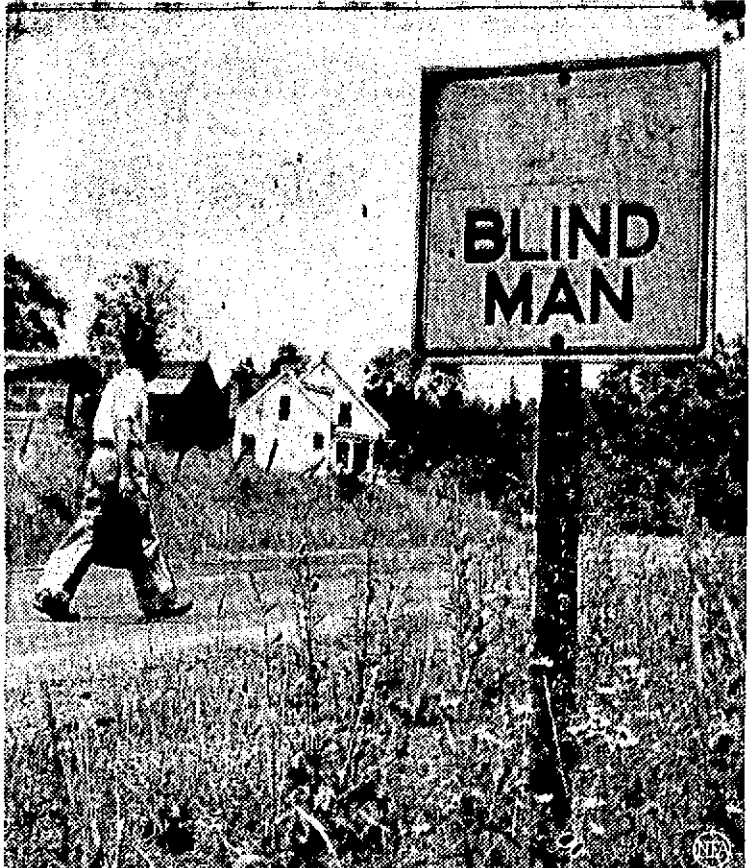

It may surprise and dismay Americans that we have to prove we are not hooligans. But if we do have to prove it we seem, in spite of the Russians, to be making some headway.

General Fair in Most of Nation

By The Associated Press
More rain fell in the Southeast part of the country today after a weekend of stormy weather in some areas.

Showers sprinkled some Western states but generally pleasant weather prevailed in most other sections of the country.

General rainfall was reported in the Virginias and North Carolina and the wet belt extended southward through Georgia and Alabama. However, the rains had diminished considerably. Heavy downpours and strong winds lashed coastal areas of the Carolinas yesterday. More than 9 inches of rain fell at Ocean Drive

Christian Is Leader in Total Yards

DALLAS — There were whole sale revisions in Southwest Conference statistical leaderships last week, the most notable being the rapid rise of Texas Christian's Jimmy Shofner in ball carrying.

The Horned Frog halfback rolled for 88 yards against Ohio State to shoot into first place with 179 yards on 28 carries.

At the same time Doris Traylor, the Baylor quarterback was singing into the lead in passing and Don Christian, Arkansas' versatile quarterback, was pushing toward the top in total offense.

Traylor has thrown more passes than anybody — and completed more. He has tried 25 and connected on 14 for 86 yards. The leader in yards, however, still is King Hill of Rice, who didn't play last week but whose 144 was better than the others could get in two games.

Christian leads in total offense with 208 yards on 26 plays, showing 73 yards rushing and 135 throwing.

Ted Sherer, the junior college transfer who kicked for a sensational 50.3 average against Georgia Tech, is the leading punter. It was his first varsity game for the Southern Methodist player to do any kicking.

In pass receiving it's Jerry Marcott, Baylor's all-around end, who has taken five throws for 23 yards.

When Texas A&M allowed Texas Tech to gain 318 yards rushing and passing it dropped the Aggies out of the lead in total offense.

Arkansas took over, giving up an average of 184 yards per game compared to 190 for Texas, 203.5 for Baylor and 222.0 for Texas A&M. The offensive team still is Rice with 415 yards in the one game played.

Satellites May Soar Up 2,000 Miles

WASHINGTON (AP) — A researcher said today American earth satellites may soar as high as 2,000 miles above the earth — 500 miles higher than the previous maximum estimate.

Richard Tousey of the U. S. Naval Research Laboratory gave the new altitude estimate in a report prepared for an international conference designed to summarize and coordinate the rocket and earth satellite programs of various nations for the International Geophysical Year.

Attending the six-day barley opening today are delegates from 12 nations, including the United States and Russia, which are the only two nations planning to launch satellites. The other nations have programs designed to track and observe satellites, or programs for exploring the upper atmosphere with high-altitude rockets.

Russia previously has indicated it plans to reveal further details of its earth satellite program at the Washington meeting.

Researcher Tousey mentioned only casually that "perhaps" the American satellites might attain a height of 2,000 miles in their oval-shaped orbits. He offered no reason for the new estimate.

About a year ago when Naval Research Laboratory scientists raised their original 900-mile estimate to 1,500 miles, they said lower estimates of the weight of the rocket-type launching vehicle, plus an improved performance outlook, appeared to justify the higher figure.

Thus, it's conceivable that still further improvements in the rocket weight and performance picture are now envisioned.

Six of the satellites are to be launched before the end of 1957 in December 1958, but no dates have yet been announced.

STONE'S VALUE

Historical value of the Rosetta Stone lies in the fact that the hieroglyphics on this fragment of stone were translated by scholars and provided the key to the language of ancient Egypt.

L.R. Issue Reverts to Legal Action

By ED CREAGH
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians may not have gained as much as they hope from the Little Rock affair.

They made all the propaganda they could out of it, they used the photographs and the eyewitness accounts of violence in an obvious effort to hurt the United States.

The point they tried to make — especially with the non-white majority of the human race — was that cruelty and intolerance are the rule of life in this country. This isn't true, of course.

For all that we may be going through a revolution in race relations, and for all that Negro-white dealings have seldom been satisfactory to either side, the races have somehow got along. These Little Rock pictures tell a true, sad story.

As everybody in this country knows a Negro can walk down the main street of any town or the atomic age, will that upset a lot of things?

The Bulls have strong arguments—especially for the long run—but these are the things the Bears concentrate on just now.
